Objets trouvés - B

This line of scarves is the direct result of a meeting between accessories designer, Philippe Roucou and a young artist, M. Chérie, both passionate collectors of abandoned images.

Their second collection, comprised of seven silk squares, is printed with anonymous Polaroids, images lost, found and then used to create an imaginary story. Each one reveals an everyday-ness, both ordinary and extraordinary, from the past and the present.

Through their work M. Chérie and Philippe Roucou show us the common values of private imagery while underlining the universality of feeling. The significance of the 'Objets trouvés' series of scarves is nestled somewhere within the tension between individual and collective.

Valorising these Polaroids, witnessing them and inventing a story is tantamount to revealing their uniqueness and preciousity, not to mention their potential status as a work of art. By turning anonymous photographs into fashion, with a nod to contemporary art, M. Chérie and Philippe Roucou's scarves link intimacy with universality, banality with exception.

Hoping that, around your neck, the story continues...
